Massive blizzard to slam into city

Weather. Alternate-side parking, garbage suspended on Monday, but schools open.

A blizzard set to hit New York City on Monday evening could be the end of this winter's unusually low snowfall.

Mayor Bill de Blasio urged New Yorkers to prepare for what could be one of the top storms in the city's history.

"Prepare for something worse than we've ever seen before," de Blasio said at a press conference with Department of Sanitation and other transportation officials on Sunday.

The National Weather Service, which issued a blizzard warning through Tuesday evening, expects between 18 and 24 inches of snowfall in the New York City area between 7 a.m. Monday and 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

Snow will start falling on Sunday night, and fall steadier and heavier, with the bulk of the snow blanketing the area late Monday and early Tuesday.

Alternate-side parking and garbage pickup have been suspended on Monday and Tuesday. Schools will be open on Monday.

De Blasio said roads will be "treacherous," and advised New Yorkers to take mass transit or work from home if possible. The mayor said those walking on the streets should be mindful of slippery conditions, and city parks will close Monday afternoon as a precaution.

Elderly neighbors should be checked on, and any hot water or heat outages should be reported to 311.

The mayor said 2,400 workers will work 12-hour shifts to clear the city's 6,000 miles of roads, and 500 salt spreaders.

"This storm has the potential to get us to what were supposed to see in one season," said Joe Pollina, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service.

What's open

- Open: Schools on Monday, but after-school activities cancelled
- Canceled: Alternate side parking, garbage collection for Monday
- 2,400: Sanitation workers to plow the city's 6,000 miles of roads

TV pioneer Joe Franklin dead at 88

TV talk show pioneer Joe Franklin, who interviewed thousands of people from a dancing dentist to Academy Award-winning actors in a far from glamorous New York studio, has died at the age of 88, his longtime producer said on Sunday.

Franklin, a New York broadcasting institution who helped bolster the careers of then-emerging stars such as Al Pacino, Bill Cosby and Bette Midler, started his TV talk show in the 1950s and kept it running into the 1990s.

Franklin died over the weekend from symptoms related to prostate cancer.

"Joe Franklin invented the TV talk show. He never said 'no' to anybody and he gave everybody a break," said Steve Garrin, a friend who produced and recorded Franklin's radio interviews.

Franklin helped establish the basic format of the TV talk show as he sat behind a desk and interviewed a litany of people who often shared the same well-worn sofa in a studio Franklin once joked was the size of two taxi cabs. He interviewed musicians from Bing Crosby to The Ramones.

Home Depot. Two dead in murder-suicide

Shoppers at the Chelsea Home Depot stocking up on salt and shovels ducked and then ran for their lives when a disgruntled worker fatally shot his boss and then turned the gun on himself Sunday, police said.

"Both persons are deceased," Det. Steven Wren told reporters outside the chain's flagship store on West 23rd Street. The store was shut down as emergency vehicles converged on the chaotic scene.

The NYPD did not immediately identify the two men, but the Daily News and The Post, citing law enforcement sources, said the shooter was Calvin Esdaile Jr., of Brooklyn, who was pronounced dead at the scene.

The supervisor who was attacked was rushed to Bellevue Hospital, where he also died.

Witnesses described a scene of utter chaos as shoppers stocking up ahead of the coming blizzard ran for cover.

"I heard some shots toward the back of the store. It sounded like four or five," a worker told The Post. "I heard someone yell, 'Oh, my God, he's dead!' Everyone was running and screaming and ducking."

PBA takes aim at Bronx Defenders

Unions. PBA President Pat Lynch demands Feds, city investigate group's appearance in anti-cop video.

The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association wants the city and federal governments to investigate the Bronx Defenders role in a music video that depicts the shooting of a police officer.

The PBA said the public defenders advocacy group, which received about $41 million in city contracts over the past two years, and $1.5 million in federal justice grants, should be investigated for their involvement in the Eric Garner tribute video, called "Hands Up," by Brooklyn rappers Uncle Murda and Maino.

The PBA thinks Bronx Defenders should be investigated for appearing in an anti-cop music video. YOUTUBE

PBA President Pat Lynch sent letters to Mayor Bill de Blasio, Council Speaker Melissa Mark-Viverito, City Comptroller Scott Stringer and Attorney General Eric Holder on Jan. 23. Lynch said the PBA is independently investigating Bronx Defenders' involvement in the video.

Posted on YouTube Dec. 3, the video shows footage of Garner being choked on Staten Island and other videos of police using force against people of color. Two men are seen pointing guns at a white police officer's head, and lyrics include "a cop got to get killed."

The Bronx Defenders office is featured as grief-stricken woman walks through the door and is comforted by an attorney.

"The Bronx Defenders does not endorse the use of violence against the police under any circumstance," the group of more than 250 advocates emailed Metro on Sunday. "We are an organization committed to preserving life, dignity and respect for all people. We are cooperating fully with the Department of Investigation."

Hacker steals 20M dating site logins, posts offer on forum

No love. Spokesmen from popular sites didn't return emails asking if they were the victims of the breach.

User names and passwords of 20 million visitors to an unidentified dating site have been hacked and offered for sale on a website, according to a posting by the thief on an online forum used by cybercriminals.

Hackers can use the credentials to try to access bank accounts, health records or other more sensitive data, said Daniel Ingevaldson, chief technology officer of fraud-detection software-maker Easy Solutions Inc., in a telephone interview. Ingevaldson issued a statement about the breach after seeing the post, published anonymously by someone using the alias "Mastermind."

Fifty percent of the credentials were for people based in Russia, and 40 percent came from the European Union. All told, the 20 million people used e-mail addresses with 345,000 different domain names. Seven million of the people that logged in to the dating site used Hotmail.com, 2.5 million used Yahoo.com, and 2.3 million used Gmail.com.

He said such personal information usually sells quickly, to fraudsters who use automated software programs to find sites where people used the same user name and password they did to access the dating site. BLOOMBERG

Competitive pressure

Samsung's $63 billion cash pile augurs tech takeovers

Whether or not Samsung Electronics Co. has BlackBerry Ltd. in its sights, it should spend some of its $63 billion of cash on takeovers.

Samsung, which has an alliance with BlackBerry, this month denied reports it proposed buying the Canadian smartphone maker for as much as $7.5 billion. Even so, a takeover would give Samsung the software to help its products communicate, according to Current Analysis Inc.

The $190 billion South Korean conglomerate makes dozens of consumer goods, from phones and televisions to vacuum cleaners and ovens. What it needs is technology to link all the devices together online in the wireless homes of the future. Other potential targets include Atmel Corp. and Freescale Semiconductor Ltd., whose chips help devices talk to each other, said CM Research Ltd.

The goal is to profit from what's known as the Internet of Things, a world where everyday items, from toasters and washing machines to phones and printers, are sewn together online and controlled by devices. The market for the Internet of Things could reach $7.1 trillion by 2020, research firm IDC has said.

"There are many areas in Internet of Things," from sensor technology to components, Samsung said in an statement. BLOOMBERG

Closure within for bombing survivor

Boston Marathon bombing survivor Michele Mahoney says she's "always been inclined to be more positive and optimistic. But still, this has changed my outlook." / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Boston. Michele Mahoney was wounded but bears no malice.

Since twin explosions tore apart her world on April 15, 2013, Michele Mahoney has not only survived, she has flourished.

The 27-year-old lost part of her left leg — though she narrowly avoided the loss of her foot — after the Boston Marathon bombing, an attack that claimed the lives of three people and the limbs of 16 others at the Boylston Street finish that day.

Since then, Mahoney has dodged the media, and declined requests by federal prosecutors to testify at the looming trial of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, the 21-year-old college student who, along with his older brother, allegedly carried out the attack.

"I didn't see anything that I thought could help convict [Tsarnaev]," said Mahoney in the campus center of a Boston-area college where she works. "I was completely oblivious to what was going on that day because I was so focused on seeing my friend cross the finish line. And my whole life revolved around this for close to a year while I was doing physical therapy. I just want to get past it. I don't want it to be something that will consume my life."

Mahoney was at the finish line that day cheering on her roommate, Remy Lawler. Her friends, Jeff Bauman and his now-wife Erin Hurley, were by her side, eagerly awaiting the moment when Lawler would cross that iconic line and earn a medal.

A pressure-cooker bomb detonated just feet from Mahoney, knocking her to the ground and temporarily deafening her. The muscle on her lower leg was shredded, and her bone was exposed. Her fibula snapped. Her Achilles' tendon was blown out of place. Nearby, a single foot lay atop a bloody sidewalk.

"I was stunned. It happened so fast. I looked around and my eyes locked with a man who was missing his legs, and I realized it was [Bauman]," said Mahoney of her friend, who became the face of bombing survivors when photos surfaced of him being rushed to safety by rescue responders and a cowboy-hat wearing bystander.

If convicted, Tsarnaev could face execution. His trial has stalled as the selection of a jury has become a challenge.

Opening statements were originally set to begin Monday, but have been delayed.

Mahoney said she will follow the trial, though for the most part she has made a conscious effort not to glue herself to media coverage.

"For me, I'm not looking for any closure through the trial. I think the only person who can provide closure is myself," she said, adding that she harbors no hatred for her alleged attacker, Tsarnaev.

Tsarnaev on trial

The search for justice

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, 21, is on trial for his life, accused of carrying out the attack with his late brother, Tamerlan Tsarnaev.

Opening statements, which were due to begin Monday, have been postponed as jury selection has taken longer than expected.

Tsarnaev's lawyers on three occasions have asked the trial be moved out of Boston on the grounds that Tsarnaev may not be able to receive a fair trial.

The trial, however, is proceeding in Boston's federal court.

The court has run into trouble finding objective jurors. More than 1,300 people have been surveyed.

Upper Class Just Got Lower Priced

Finally, luxury built for value—not for false status

Only a few of us are born with silver spoons in our mouths. Until Stauer came along, you needed an inheritance to buy a timepiece with class and refinement. Not any more. The Stauer Magnificat II brings the impeccable quality and engineering once found only in the watch collections of the idle rich. If you have actually earned your living through intelligence, hard work, and perseverance, you will now be rewarded with a timepiece of understated class that will always be a symbol of refined taste. The striking case, finished in luxurious gold, compliments an etched ivory-colored dial exquisitely. By using advanced computer design and robotics, we have been able to drastically reduce the price on this precision movement.

Do you have enough confidence to pay less? Status seekers are willing to overpay just to wear a designer name. Not the Stauer client. The Magnificat II is built for people who have their own good taste and understand the value of their dollar—finally, luxury built for confident people. And this doesn't mean the rich aren't smart. Quite the contrary, Stauer's clients include a famous morning news host, the infamous captain of a certain starship, a best actor nominee, a best actor winner and the number one rock guitarist of all time. They were all clever enough to recognize a spectacular value.

It took three years of development and $26 million in advanced Swiss-built watch-making machinery to create the Magnificat II. Look at the interior dials and azure-colored hands. Turn the watch over and examine the 27-jeweled automatic movement through the exhibition back. When we took the watch to George Thomas (the most renowned watchmaker and watch historian in America), he disassembled the Magnificat II and studied the escapement, balance wheel and the rotor. He remarked on the detailed guilloche face, gilt winding crown, and the crocodile-embossed leather band. He was intrigued by the three interior dials for day, date, and 24-hour moon phases. He estimated that this fine timepiece would cost over $2,500. We all smiled and told him that the Stauer price was less than $90. He was stunned. We felt like we had accomplished our task. A truly magnificent watch at a truly magnificent price!

Try the Magnificat II for 60 days and if you are not receiving compliments, please return the watch for a full refund of the purchase price. The precision-built movement carries a 2 year warranty against defect. If you trust your own good taste, the Magnificat II is built for you.

Saving the last of the Northern White Rhinos

Kenya. Indigenous communities hold the key to saving Africa's great animals.

Five years ago, I heard about a plan to airlift four of the last Northern White Rhinos from a zoo in the Czech Republic back to Africa. It sounded like a story line for a Disney film but in reality, it was a desperate, last-ditch effort to save an entire species. There are now only seven of these rhinos left in the world.

Lewa Wildlife Conservancy in Kenya worked hard to make the move possible and the rhinos were flown on a cold, snowy night in December 2009. They landed and were brought to roam "free" on the savannas of Kenya at the Ol Pejeta Conservancy. The hope was then and now to breed them. The air, water, food and room to roam could stimulate them to repopulate Africa through crossbreeding them with Southern White Rhinos to preserve the genes.

Recently, I returned to visit the rhinos that were airlifted. It warmed my heart to see them nuzzling on the open plains, but I was reminded of the tragic truth by the team of armed guards, who are there to protect them from poachers. If the current trajectory of death continues, rhinos and a host of lesser-known plains animals will be extinct in our lifetime. Sophisticated, poaching networks, fueled by demand from newly minted millionaires in emerging markets, are devastating the mega-fauna of the African plains.

Little has been said about the indigenous communities on the front lines of the poaching wars and the incredible work that is being done to strengthen them. These communities may hold the key to saving Africa's great animals.

But it takes work to create these protected areas. The Nature Conservancy has been helping the Northern Rangelands Trust as they form "community wildlife conservancies." The locals profit from wealthy tourists who can provide better long-term returns than the short-term gains of poaching. The communities now realize that when a rhino or elephant is killed, they are losing an asset. If welfare, education and their livelihoods are being jeopardized when an animal is killed, they won't let it happen.

Why Aren't Doctors Telling About These Two Often

Two Advanced Medical Treatments Every Knee Arthritis Sufferer

by OsteoRelief Center

OsteoRelief Center is a medical clinic with locations in Mid-town NYC, Financial District NYC And north Jersey that has treated thousands of knee arthritis patients since 2009.

Here is what every knee arthritis sufferer should know about the best treatments and options available today. Including when and why you should consider each of these 2 treatment approaches to get maximum results.

If you suffer with knee arthritis pain, you have probably already tried many treatments ... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that, even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for knee arthritis pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are There Any Better Options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there are two very good options for knee arthritis to help relieve the pain.

Two options that a lot of knee arthritis sufferers have never heard of.

Before we get into the two treatments, please understand this...

OsteoRelief Center is a REAL medical clinic that has treated thousands of knee arthritis sufferers. Patients travel from all over the country to be treated at one of their clinics because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover are two REAL medical treatments. Not miracle cures you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no cure for arthritis. But there are these two treatments that have already helped thousands of knee arthritis sufferers - possibly just like you.

The first treatment is more common than the second. Even if you have heard of this treatment - or even tried it without good results - please read this. You will find out why it may not have worked for you and how you may be able to get much better results.

#1 Viscosupplementation

Viscosupplementation has gained quite a bit of popularity in recent years and it has gotten mixed results for a couple of reasons.

But before we get into that, here's what you need to know about viscosupplementation.

When you have arthritis, you suffer a decrease in the lubrication fluids in your knee.

In other words, your knee joints basically "dries up."

The lubricating fluid that decreases is called "synovial fluid."

Pharmaceutical companies (with the help of scientists) can now make natural synovial fluid gel-like compounds that, during viscosupplementation, treatments... doctors can precisely introduce directly into the knee and other joints.

This helps replace the lubricating fluid to the knee joint - allowing it to move more freely and smoothly and often decreasing or even eliminating the pain.

What Results Can Be Expected?

Like all medical treatments, the results vary and can not be predicted. But many knee arthritis sufferers get dramatic results. It is not uncommon for patients to either postpone knee replacement surgery for years... or even permanently cancel it.

But There Is A BIG Problem

The key is the treatment must be EXTREMELY PRECISE. If the injection is slightly off, the medication will not get into the knee joint and the treatment will not work.

That's why the experts at OsteoRelief Center use advanced digital imaging so they can see the medicine going directly into the knee joint during the treatment.

Research shows that doctors performing joint injections without imaging miss the joint as much as 30% of the time.

If you have tried viscosupplementation without this special digital imaging without good results - this may be why.

That's why OsteoRelief Center takes it even one step further. They do not just use one step process of advanced imaging during treatment - they use two in their "double confirmation" process. This is to ensure patients get the best possible results.

Another Important Factor

Viscosupplementation medications also come in several different brands and chemical make-ups. Just like all medications, some people respond better to some than others. While many doctors only use one brand, the experts at Osteorelief Center use several and great effort is taken to figure out what the best one for YOU is.

One last thing: The experts at OsteoRelief Center have found that the earlier you start Viscosupplementation the better.

This is most likely because the longer you wait - the more joint destruction takes place.

That's why OsteoRelief is now seeing so many patients as young as 45.

Summary: If you have knee arthritis pain and have not tried Viscosupplementation, you should look into it as soon as possible.

If you have tried it without good results, you may still be able to get great results with the proper imaging and specific medication.

What Should You Do If Viscosupplementation Fails?

When conservative treatment, including visco supplementation fail... most knee arthritis sufferers believe their only option is total knee replacement surgery.

This is not true... and here is why

There is another treatment for serious knee arthritis pain most people (and even doctors) do not know about.

#2 Radiofrequency Neurotomy

This treatment is called, "RadiofrequncyNeurotomy." RF for short

RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

Several branches of nerves that surround the knee are known as "genicular nerves."

Radiofrequncy waves are delivered to the genicular nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves

ADVERTISEMENT

Knee Arthritis Sufferers Successful Treatments?

Needs To Know - Before Or After Knee Replacement Surgery

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "G Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, Genicular Neurotomy (G - RF) is performed for long term relief.

Is It Safe?

Research has shown this procedure to be safe and effective.

One study published November 4, 2010 in the journal Pain found that RF treated subjects on average "achieved at least 50% knee pain relief at 1, 4 and 12 weeks, respectively. No patient reported a postprocedure adverse event during the follow-up period. RF neurotomy of genicular nerves leads to significant pain reduction and functional improvement in a subset of elderly chronic knee OA pain, and thus may be an effective treatment in such cases."

It should also be mentioned that, like all research, more studies should be done to get even more answers.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and viscosupplementation do not offer good enough results.

RF can be utilized before resorting to total knee replacement. RF allows many patients to avoid knee replacement surgery.

RF has also been found effective AFTER knee replacement surgery when the patient still feels pain.

The pain after a failed knee replacement surgery can be debilitating and this procedure can be the only thing that helps and give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

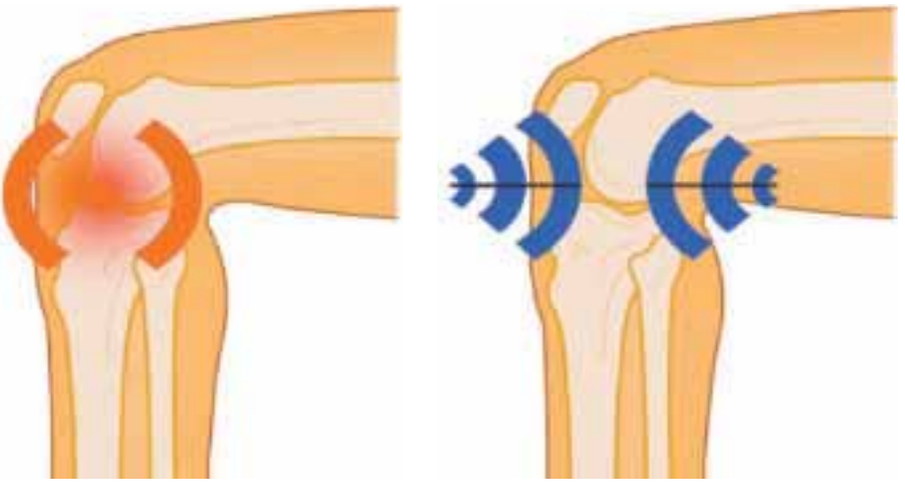
Many experts suggest choosing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most advanced technology all under one roof.

This way, the doctors working on your case can give you a proper examination and advise the best possible treatment plan for your individual case.

Several experts work as a team to offer you the best treatment options at the appropriate time to maximize results. It is also very convenient to have all your doctors and treatments in one place. Traveling to different offices can be time consuming and and even more expensive.

OsteoRelief Center believes this "X" factor is one of the reasons so many knee arthritis sufferers travel from all over the country to be treated at one of their advanced medical clinics.

Advanced Treatment Uses Radio Frequencies To Relieve Knee Arthritis Pain



Science rescues knee arthritis sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

Preparing the next generation of performers for Hollywood

Training. Pace University students head West.

Traditionally, university theater programs have been just that — a way to train performers for a career on the stage. But one university decided that the old model was no longer working.

"We have an obligation to train performers for the entire industry," says Jorge Cacheiro, the executive director of Pace School for Performing Arts at Pace University. "Previously, students were being trained to go into the theater industry exclusively."

So earlier this month, Pace decided to go Hollywood — literally. The school launched a new Los Angeles-based acting and dance-intensive program for seniors getting ready to graduate this spring. For the last three weeks, in addition to taking classes geared toward performing on film, the selected students have been meeting with casting directors and producers.

"We want to be the forerunner in bicoastal training," says Cacheiro.

Adjusting to the camera

A major focus of the intensive class was to teach the students how to adapt to performing on film. Cacheiro explains that the type of dance needed for film is something "that's not really taught" in a traditional choreography class. Among the professionals the students are working with is "So You Think You Can Dance" choreographer Mandy Moore. Cacheiro says the dancers are learning to perform a full range of styles. "One day they were given choreography for a Pitbull music video," he recalls. "Then the very next day those same students were told to create something for Disney."

A changing industry

One student's journey

Emmanuel Polycarpe is currently a senior in Pace's acting program. Originally from Long Island, he says he'd never been to Los Angeles before being selected for the class. "What's really awesome is that we get to talk to a lot of professionals about things like how to audition and how to prepare material," he says. "A huge part of it is building these relationships."

Polycarpe says he is working on a scene from HBO's "The Wire" to perform at the showcase, but recalls that one good bit of advice the students received came from an actor who came in as a guest speaker. "He said, you may not always book the job, but you should always book the room."

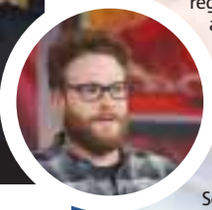
Ryan Adams and Mandy Moore call it quits

This will probably inspire someone to write a breakup song.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Dang it, this one seemed like it had staying power too. "Mandy Moore and Ryan Adams have mutually decided to end their marriage of almost six years," reps for the now-exes say in a statement. "It is a respectful, amicable parting of ways, and both Mandy and Ryan are asking for media to respect their privacy at this time." OK, two things: First, there's no need to brag about how laid-back and easygoing your breakup is. We get it, you're so cool. And second: Adams and Moore — or at least their reps — get major points for correctly using "media" as the plural noun that it is.

Dennis Rodman wants to take Seth Rogen to North Korea



Dear friend of North Korean leader Kim Jong Un and noted crazypants Dennis Rodman is finally — finally! — chiming in on "The Interview," the controversial Seth Rogen comedy that supposedly led to the Sony hack. "If the North wanted to hack anything in the world, anything in the world, really, they are going to go hack a movie? Really?" Rodman tells the Hollywood Reporter. And the regular visitor to North Korea has a plan to ease tensions caused by the film — or at least insert himself into the conversation. "I would ask Seth and all those involved in the movie to go to North Korea with me. And then do an interview with me about the movie." Somehow, I don't see Rogen going for that right about now.

Daily video

'SNL' goes a little bit country

HULU.COM

With "The Voice" judge Blake Shelton hosting "Saturday Night Live," it's no surprise the show dipped into the country side of things with the music video "Wishin' Boot." The rather ridiculous song tells the tale of a mystical, beat-up cowboy boot that offers help to those in need — like Ady Bryant's hooker jailed for killing a john. Also, slap a big mustache on Shelton and he looks a heck of a lot like Nick Offerman.

New 'X-Men' film finds some new mutants

INTRODUCING YOUR NEW JEAN GREY, SOPHIE TURNER.

Director Bryan Singer has found some fresh blood for the younger versions of mutants Jean Grey, Storm and Cyclops in the upcoming "X-Men: Age of Apocalypse," and one of them is "Game of Thrones" star Sophie Turner, who plays Sansa Stark on the hit HBO series. She takes on the role originated by Famke Janssen in the original "X-Men" film 15 years ago. While Janssen, Halle Berry and James Marsden appeared in their roles for last year's "Days of Future Past," the next installment in the franchise follows the younger, cuter timeline. Sorry, guys!

Ryan Guzman plays a psycho teen in love with Jennifer Lopez in "The Boy Next Door." / GETTY IMAGES

The breakthrough: Ryan Guzman

Introductions. A TV star sneaks onto the big screen in "The Boy Next Door."

Fans of "Pretty Little Liars" and the "Step Up" films are already familiar with Ryan Guzman, but with the sexy thriller "The Boy Next Door," a lot more people are going to get a look at Guzman — and at a lot more of him. Here's an introduction.

He's not tired of cookies — yet:
"Everybody wants to know about the cookies," Guzman says, citing a stand-out double entendre from the trailer. "As I came into New York, a couple of fans were waiting with cookies in hand. So I plan on getting as many cookies as I possibly can while the oven is still running."

He's heard how audiences react to the film:
"So far, I've heard someone yell, 'Replay!' after the intimate sex scene."

He's sorry for freaking anyone out in real life:
"People get extremely scared by [his character] Noah Sandborn, so much so that when they see me in real life, they look at me a little differently. Until they actually start talking to me and realize that I'm just harmless little Ryan Guzman, there's a lot of people that are a little standoffish at first."

He knows where to look for inspiration:
"I definitely have plenty of actors that I look up to, like Marlon Brando or Tom Hardy, Christian Bale. I actually used Mark Wahlberg's 'Fear' performance as something to base Noah Sandborn on in the beginning."

Where will you see him next? As Rio in "Jem and the Holograms":
"Rio in the film is kind of the up-and-coming Rio. He thinks he has everything in order and knows what he wants, but then throughout the film you find out that he has no clue. And hopefully you like my singing. It's the first time I ever tried. I was more terrified about that than getting naked in front of the camera, let's just say that."

Here's the last thing he Googled:
"The last thing I Googled was actually the definition of translucent, which is kind of weird out of context. I was writing something at the time. I do short stories and poetry and scripts and whatnot."

Box office. Again, no movie came close to 'American Sniper'

With its major competition a Jennifer Lopez trash-fest, a Johnny Depp mustache movie and a cartoon that pairs Shakespeare with ELO, Clint Eastwood's "American Sniper" continued to reign over the box office. New pictures "The Boy Next Door," "Mortdecai" and "Strange Magic" all failed to come remotely close to the war drama's second weekend, which bagged another $64.4 million.

That pushes it over the $200 million mark in just 10 days, and ensures that the culture fighting over whether it's anti- or pro-war will continue to be waged on your Facebook feeds for months more.

Of the three newbies, only "The Boy Next Door" had what could charitably be called a solid weekend. Produced for only $4 million, the gender-switched "Fatal Attraction" took in $15 million.

Meanwhile, "Mortdecai" became the latest and biggest Johnny Depp bomb. In fact, its $4.1 million share was lower than even the George Lucas-shepherded passion project "Strange Magic," a very loose take on "A Midsummer Night's Dream" with pop hits ranging from Whitney Houston to Elvis. That made a mere $5.5 million.

Elsewhere, "The Imitation Game" crossed $60 million to become, after "Sniper," the second highest grossing of the current crop of Best Picture nominees, just ahead of Wes Anderson's "The Grand Budapest Hotel." And "Cake," the Jennifer Aniston-starring indie that was briefly seen as a major Oscar contender only to score 47 percent on Rotten Tomatoes, made $1 million in its theatrical debut.

Easy healthy food swaps

Diet. You don't have to give up what you love — just reach for a smarter option.

Depriving yourself of the foods you love is just going to lead to failed diets and binges. / ISTOCK

Eating better is not only for those looking to lose weight. Nutrition is part of living healthier, but too often requires sacrifices of taste and beloved foods that most of us just aren't willing to make.

"Eating abundantly and including all of your favorite foods in moderation, as well as substituting healthier options, are both important to curbing cravings and enjoying the foods you love," says Jennifer Adler, a certified nutritionist and author of "Passionate Nutrition," a new memoir-cookbook about healing herself with food.

"Just remember, it's not all-or-nothing!" Adler says. "Aim to eat healthfully most of the time. Learn to live in the gray instead of black-and-white thinking that New Year's resolutions tend to trigger."

So how can you stick with your plan to make 2015 a healthier year? Choose better alternatives of the foods you already love. We asked Adler for some healthy swaps that won't leave you feeling deprived.

1 Grab items with fewer ingredients. A shorter label means fewer preservatives, emulsifiers, colors and processing. "Choose yogurt with milk and live cultures, and ice cream with five ingredients or less," Adler recommends. A good rule of thumb: You should be able to easily pronounce all of the ingredients.

2 Eat bread, but a better kind. Adler recommends swapping sourdough or sprouted bread for your typical loaf of white bread. In these varieties, the gluten is broken down in the process of making the bread, so it becomes easier to digest.

3 For your second cup of the day, choose tea. "Instead of opting for coffee breath, nettle tea provides powerful benefits including better hair, skin and metabolism," Adler says.

4 Skip the fat-free products. Fat is not a bad word anymore. "Fat-free products are more processed and have added sugars, salts and thickeners to make up for lack of taste," Adler points out. "Opt for the original, embracing healthy fats that taste so much better, are more satisfying and great for your skin."

Keep work from controlling your life

Advice. Get tips on how to have a life outside of your day job — Yes it's possible!

You don't really want to be glued to your work email, do you? / ISTOCK

Chances are, even if you love your job, you want your life to be more than just work, work, work. But instead of using off-hours to pursue a new hobby, many either don't have the energy or are still "on," responding to emails.

"Technology has freed us up in many ways, but at the same time it's imprisoned us. It's very difficult to create boundaries," says Brigid Schulte, author of "Overwhelmed: Work, Love and Play When No One Has Time."

Schulte advises setting aside a certain time each day to check email. She also says that leaving work "on time" won't hold you back. "The way you get ahead is [simply] to do really great work," she says.

The sad thing is, according to researcher Roger Mannel, even when people aren't busy, they still don't know how to use their time. That leads to things like mindlessly watching TV instead of feeling satisfied.

"There is no rule of thumb like 'X' amount of leisure time makes you feel great," Schulte says. It's important to think about what you really want to do with your free time — and then making a regular schedule to do it.

Best of both worlds

What work-life balance looks like

Craig Nevill-Manning has a demanding job as an engineering director at Google, building features like their Crisis Response organization and improving the search engine's functions. But for years, he wanted to pursue another interest of his: opening up a café. He opened Happy Bones café and has struck a balance between working full-time and tending to his passion project.

"I have great partners, including my wife, and a great café manager," he tells us. "And at Google, we encourage employees to have a good work-life balance." Being honest with your managers about your outside passions and not hiding them is one key to helping you do it all. "Life is all about variety," Nevill-Manning says. A good work-life balance is part of that.

Moving on up. How to jump-start your career in the new year.

Having a job search buddy (or buddies) will make things easier. / ISTOCK

With February just around the corner, it's easy to start slowly backtracking on your more ambitious 2015 career-related goals. But one entrepreneur stresses that everyone should still take the time to invest in their careers.

"I think the first thing is to be sure to make your goal really specific and really actionable," says Kathryn Minshew, the CEO and founder of The Muse, a career site geared toward younger workers. "For example, instead of saying, 'I'm going to find a new job this year,' you can say, 'I'm going to apply to five jobs a week.'"

Here are some other ways you can leave the traditional ways of job searching behind.

Have a buddy

Everything is easier when you have someone to bounce ideas off of, Minshew says. It's also always good to have a second pair of eyes look over your cover letter.

Network more

"I think that networking gets such a bad rap," says Minshew. "In reality, it's all about getting to know people better." A key to successful connections, she says, is phrasing. "Instead of saying, 'Oh, I'm a writer.' You can say, "I'm a writer who really loves writing about history.'"

Follow up

"About 24 hours after meeting them, I'd send a follow-up email and add them on LinkedIn," says Minshew. "Then maybe two weeks later send that person a note saying hello."

LAKSHMI GANDHI

Tip

Start a new project

"Let's say you are looking for a job in social media," says Minshew. "You can suggest to a local nonprofit that you will volunteer to do their social media for a few months for free."

Horoscope

Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Sit down with a good friend and toss ideas around. You can start a business with virtually no overhead if you use the skills you have.

Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20 Your energy is high, and competitive physical events will attract you. Look at investments that appear to be lucrative.

Aries | March 21-April 20 Behind-the-scenes activity will bring you great and unusual rewards. Volunteer work will open your eyes to a host of new avenues.

Taurus | April 21-May 21 Your ability to work in fine detail will bring approval from others. Avoid exhaustion, or minor ailments will slow you down.

Gemini | May 22-June 20 Don't exaggerate or you will be disapproved of. Your idea of what you want in a mate is changing. This could cause problems.

Cancer | June 21-July 22 Don't forget to enjoy yourself today. Remember that working without rest isn't good for anyone. You need to find an outlet that will satisfy your needs.

Leo | July 23-Aug. 22 Home-improvement projects should be at the top of your list. You can save yourself some money if you ask friends for help.

Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22 Your emotional life will go downhill if you continue to play both ends against the middle. Social activities will be fun, but you must not be overindulgent.

Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22 Be careful whom you confide in. Someone you know may be twisting your words around. Be in the moment.

Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21 Social events will be stimulating. You will meet someone who interests you in several ways.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21 You can expect to encounter conflicts regarding a legal agreement. Pass the time doing things that will be entertaining.

Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20 A love connection can be made through the company you keep. The relationship will move rather rapidly, so hold on to your hat.

Letters to the editor

Racism is a widespread problem

Re: 'No justice for some' (Metro, Jan. 22); 'Obscuring the issue' (Metro, Jan. 23-25) I'd like to thank letter writer John McLaughlin for having the clarity of vision to see (and the conviction of character to express) the fact that victims and perpetrators of crimes are equally as violated and guilty regardless of the amount of pigmentation in their skin.

MARK STEERE, VIA EMAIL

Re: 'Obscuring the issue' (Metro, Jan. 23-25) In response to Larry Fowler's letter, you have to look at more than the liberal media to be informed of news. The 2,000 Nigerians who were slaughtered were all over the news, just not CNN or NBC. In response to Mr. Montgomery, I disagree about the vicious crimes being committed by African-Americans in Florida. Not one word of outrage from the African-American community, or its leaders. I am not trying to defend white officers who cross the line. But the outrage is more than one-sided. Racism is a problem of all races, and the current actions are only making it worse The African-American community is not responsible for these crimes, just like all police are not responsible for the actions of a few.

1k for Coach K

Another record at MSG

There's just something about Mike Krzyzewski and Madison Square Garden. Duke rallied to overcome a double-digit deficit to defeat St. John's on Sunday, 77-68, and in the process Coach K became the first D-1 coach to win 1,000 games. He set the all-time record at MSG in 2011 vs. Michigan State (903).

First Down laser tries to

NFL. New technology could improve game for referees, players and fans alike.

A new and game-changing technology could make its long-awaited debut in football stadiums in the coming year.

It just won't be inside any NFL stadiums.

First Down Laser Systems (FDLS), a company that has developed a laser that projects a first-down line across the field that is visible for fans to see inside the stadium and on television, is in discussions with the Canadian Football League for a test run during its season this spring.

If the company and the CFL can hammer out a deal, NFL commissioner Roger Goodell and others will no doubt be closely monitoring the implementation, performance and appearance of the technology.

"We continue to have a pretty good dialogue with the Canadian Football League, and we are hoping to pin them down to a date and test this spring," FDLS spokesman Larry Weisman said. "The NFL will be watching what we do. We met with them a year ago last May, and they told us what they liked and what they didn't like in the model we showed them.

Quoted

"We are not on their front burner but also not on the back burner. We will keep them apprised of what we are doing."

Larry Weisman

"What they told us we took to heart. The last thing they said was they wanted to see it in live use. For us that is the next goal."

The laser system is attached to the first-down markers and beams a colored light across the field.

It is similar to the yellow line that viewers see on TV.

With the laser system, though, the line would also be seen by fans, players and coaches in the stadium as well.

"It gives technology a boost in the stadium that people at home already enjoy," Weisman said. "The issue the NFL has is the competition with the couch. How do you replicate for the stadium what fans are accustomed to viewing at home? The [laser] strip is one way."

First Down has already debuted the technology in a major live sporting event twice. For the last two years, the laser was used at the NCAA outdoor track and field championships in Eugene, Oregon.

The NFL could be adding first-down laser technology within the next few seasons. / FIRST DOWN LASER SYSTEMS

bring TV display to stadiums

The line indicated distances for competitors in field events like the shot put, javelin, hammer throw and long jump and added another one to show the leader's score.

"It was very well received by USA Track and Field and the foundation that supports it," Weisman said. "We did it in 2013 and were invited back for 2014. We expect to do it again. The fans, coaches and athletes liked it."

The technology can also be used in Nascar to track cars, cover offside calls in soccer, pin-point 3-pointers in basketball and even in nonsport commercial ventures.

However, the ultimate goal is to get the technology inside NFL stadiums.

First Down Laser Systems hopes to take a big step later this year with their technology's performance North of the border.

"The line has to move in the NFL and in consistent fashion and fast," Weisman said. "We are prepared for that and our technology will work in those situations. Until we do that and show the NFL that, they are going to continue to ask that question.

"They have not given us any indication of how quick they would do something. I can't speak for them, but they want to see it in a live venue before they take the next step. We are not on their front burner but also not on the back burner. We will keep them apprised of what we are doing."
